MEMORANDUM

To: Park City; Rebecca Ward
From: General Plan Consultant Team; Design Workshop, WSP
Date: January 27, 2025
Project Name: Park City General Plan Update
Project #: 7669
Subject: Recreation Advisory Board Update

Park City is in the process of updating its General Plan, a key document that will guide the city's future growth, development, and sustainability efforts. The General Plan reflects the community's aspirations, outlining the steps, actions, partnerships, and policies needed to achieve the collective vision. It will include six plan elements: Land Use, Water, Transportation and Traffic Circulation, Moderate Income Housing, and Implementation Strategies.

The General Plan update process is divided into five phases, with the second and third phases currently underway. In this initial work, the focus has been on gathering information about existing conditions and engaging the community for their feedback. This includes soliciting input from the city's five advisory boards. The data and community insights will provide a foundation for developing key elements of the General Plan that support Park City's long-term goals. Community Engagement Window 1 took place during this time period, and has included a community launch event, Council one-on-one meetings, Advisory Board and Technical Advisory group meetings, individual neighborhood meetings, a statistically valid survey, and a project website launch. The project website is <https://engageparkcity.org/generalplan>

TIMELINE

The next phases focus on community visioning, exploring different plan alternatives related to growth and development, and the General Plan adoption process. Two additional engagement windows will take place in these phases of work. The graphic above identifies the project phases and timeline.

As the process moves forward, the updated General Plan will aim to promote sustainable development, support a balanced relationship between tourism and the local economy, and address pressing traffic and transportation challenges. It will also define housing goals, including strategies for moderate-income housing. Additionally, the process will review and potentially update the four key values from the 2014 General Plan.

In the engagement and conversations held to date, a key aspect the team has heard is the importance of having an implementable plan that is easily understood and concise. The plan will establish a clear path for implementation and serve as a blueprint for Park City's future.

In the February 4, 2025 meeting, the consultant team will share a presentation about the General Plan process. As part of the discussion, the Recreation Advisory Board is asked to consider the following key questions for discussion.

1. What key topics or issues would you like to see addressed in the General Plan?
2. What are some of the key opportunities you see related to parks and recreation in Park City?
3. Any additional items you would like to share with the team?
